DRAFAHL CASE WAS SUDDENLY SETTLED

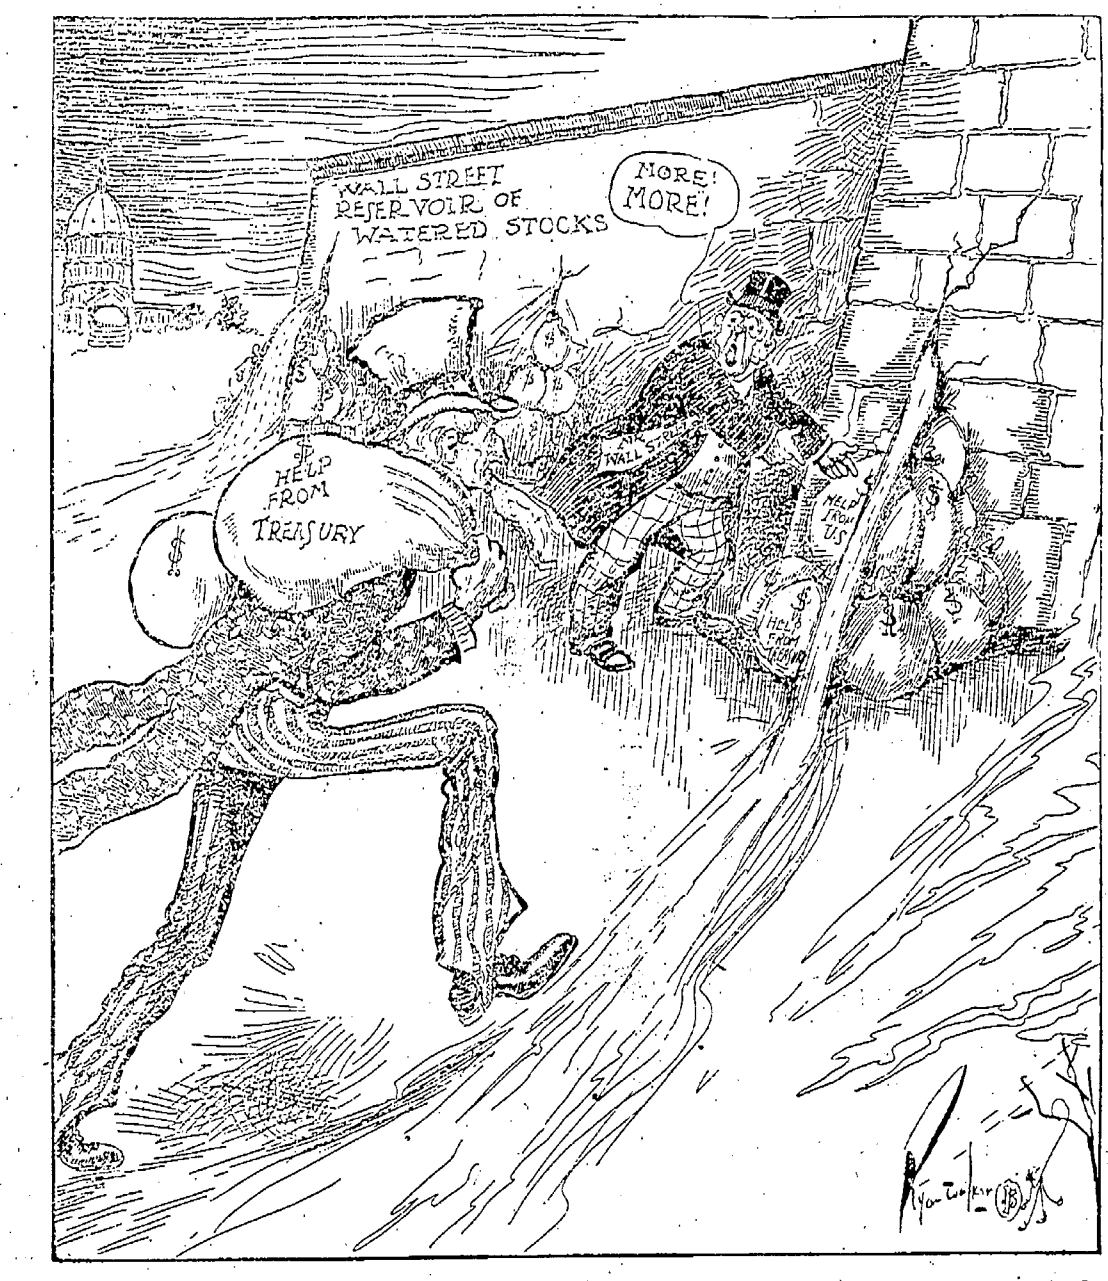

After Jury Had Been Drawn in Court Today—Defendants Pay $125 to Have Two Actions Dropped.
After a jury had been drawn in municipal court this afternoon for the second trial of the assault and battery action of the State vs. Floyd Drafa, brought on complaint of Andrew Olson of Atton, the largest gallery which has assembled there for many months was sadly disappointed by the sudden settlement of the case by the lawyers representing the contending parties. Atty. J. J. Cunningham, representing the complainant, had secured the assistance of George G. Sutherland, while John Cunningham, counsel for the defendant, had pressed T. S. Nolan into service on his side, and the outlook for a legal battle was very promising. The settlement involves not only this case but the damage action brought by Olson against Deputy Game Warden Peter Drafa for alleged destruction of property in the former's saloon at Atton several months ago. By its terms Drafa and son agreed to pay $125 to have both actions dropped.

ATTELL FAVORITE OF FEATHERWEIGHTS

Harry Baker, Considered Good But Hardly Good Enough to Down His Opponent.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 18.—Tonight, before the Pacific Athletic club, Harry Baker, who has been the professional ring less than a year, will again face Abe Attell in an endeavor to wrest the featherweight title from that doughty "hero of a hundred battles." Ever since Baker managed to stay twenty rounds with Attell last October there has been a great desire to see them come together again. As the date for the bout approached the interest has increased and it is certain that an immense crowd will witness the contest.
Both fighters have been training faithfully for several weeks past and in the matter of condition there appears to be no room for choice between them. In weight and measurements they likewise compare closely. But in the matter of experience Attell, of course, has a most decided advantage. He has been in the fighting game for six or seven years, during which time he has faced the best men in his division, among them Frankie Neil, "Kid" Herman, Jimmy Walsh, Tom Murphy, Harry Forbes, "Kid" Broad, and so on down the list to the days when George Dixon was in his prime.
Baker, on the other hand, is a comparative novice at the game. He has been fighting for two years but only last March did he enter the professional class. His fights with Frankie Neil and Abe Attell are the only notable events in which he has engaged. But in these two fights he made such a splendid show as to give his admirers the greatest confidence in his future. Both fights went the full limit of twenty rounds. In the go with Neil Baker was given the decision, while he lost to Attell by a narrow margin. In good condition he is counted to give the little Hebrew champion a lively tussle for the decision tonight, and there is plenty of Baker money taking up the Attell offers at odds averaging 10 to 7.

PREPARATIONS FOR CENTENARY OF LEE

His Alma Mater, Washington and Lee University, Will Have Elaborate Celebration.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Lexington, Va., Jan. 18.—Of the scores of observances to be held throughout the south in celebration of the one hundred anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee, it is safe to assert that none will be of a more notable or imposing character than that to be held under the auspices of Washington and Lee University, his alma mater. Preparations for the observance have been going forward for several months. The chief celebration is to be held tomorrow, but preliminary exercises are to take place tonight under the auspices of the Graham-Lee Literary Society. By a happy selection the oration tomorrow will be delivered by Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts, who was one of General Lee's opponents in the Civil War.
After the war and after Gen. Lee had been offered many positions of honor and emolument the great leader felt that there was no higher call to duty, and no greater privilege for him than to spend the remainder of his life in endeavoring to influence young men in mental, moral and spiritual development. So he became president of Washington College and thither flocked the youth of the south. During the five years that Gen. Lee was spared to preside over the institution and impress his influence upon those committed to his charge more than 900 students were enrolled.

PASSENGERS HOLD PRAYER MEETINGS

Two English Evangelists Successful in Novel Services and Plan to Extend Operations.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
London, Eng., Jan. 18.—Two enterprising and up-to-date evangelists have hit upon the idea of a train prayer meeting. Suburban travelers are the ones approached by these two self-appointed missionaries, whose first "attack" has been made upon the North London railway trains, morning and evening. One plays hymns on a concertina, and joins in singing and praying. These services are not generally disapproved. Indeed, many business men who crowd the cars at the times these services are held, seem to enjoy them. So enthusiastic are the originators over their success that—provided sufficient funds are forthcoming—they purpose extending their sphere of activity to other railway lines. They have received the consent of several railway companies already, who favorably view the new departure.

DAVIDSON DENIES THAT HE TRIED TO BOSS SENATORS

First Cloud In The State Capitol Is Dispelled Very Easily By The Governor.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Jan. 18.—The second week of the Wisconsin legislature has brought forth half a hundred bills proposed, as new laws, but many of the most important measures to be enacted at this session have not yet made their appearance or been suggested in the bills thus far introduced. Not one life insurance bill has been offered, nor any to provide for regulation of street railways, lighting, gas and other public service corporations, the regulation of which was demanded by Governor Davidson on the campaign stump and in his message. It appears to be the case that members of some ambitious assemblymen and senators may offer personal efforts at these matters of legislation, the bills finally to be enacted will come from the proper committees well along in the session and after carefully deliberating upon the business.
The pleasantness that marked the speakership contest, and the absence of factional controversy or jealousy seem to continue and even increase. Unless a great change occurs this session will be notable for the failure of any factionalism to develop. One incident has occurred to somewhat disturb the serenity. It has been charged that Governor Davidson is "butting in" to the distribution of patronage in selection of legislative employees. The Milwaukee members are indignant because they declare the executive wants their friend, Chris Paulus, left out as senate postmaster because he fell three or four places below J. M. Hubbard, the governor's friend from Stoughton, in the competitive examinations held by the civil service commission. The fact is that Mr. Hubbard was highest in the commission's rankings and Paulus, helped with an advantageous mark on account of holding the job twice before and getting "experience," which counts in the examination, fell to fourth place. This little controversy will come up in the senate Tuesday for settlement. Otherwise there is not a ripple on the placid surface of Wisconsin's political sea.

RAIL QUESTIONS ISSUES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Conservatives And Liberals Appealed To By Present Premier, Who Is Fighting Socialism.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Victoria, B. C., Jan. 18.—Much interest is manifested in the nominations tomorrow of candidates for the eleventh parliament of British Columbia. The elections will take place early next month, and parliament will assemble in March. Never has a campaign under British representative government been so curiously complicated with confusion of parties and issues as is the present one.
The political battle is not, as elsewhere in Canada, a straight fight between the Liberal and Conservative forces. Premier Richard McBride appeals to the country as leader of a straight Liberal-Conservative party, ignoring the socialist following which has kept the present government in power during the past three sessions. The socialists will put up candidates of their own in virtually all constituencies, and in addition the embryo labor party given birth at the late convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress is preparing to take part in the fight.
The government will make its fight principally upon the general prosperity of the country, the improved stability of conditions and provincial credit since Premier McBride's accession to power, and adherence to a policy of no subsidies for railway builders. The Liberals, naturally, will contend that provincial prosperity, improved credit, and the treasury surplus result not from governmental efficiency but despite government inefficiency—as a consequence of fortuitous fixed conditions and evolutionary processes. They will also urge the broader policy of stimulating rather than discouraging the opening of the provincial waste places and their dormant industries by means of colonization railroads, assisted if necessary to a reasonable extent.

FACULTY OPPOSED TO EATON'S RETURN

Round Robin Prepared at Meeting of Professors of Beloit College Yesterday.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., Jan. 8.—Though Rev. Edward Dwight Eaton has accepted the invitation of the trustees of Beloit college to return as president it is possible that he will change his plan. It has been known that the greater number of faculty members opposed the action of the trustees and yesterday the professors and instructors held an alleged "indignation" meeting. It is said that a round robin, acquainting Dr. Eaton of the opposition to him, was prepared and forwarded. When President Eaton left Beloit college two years ago it was to enter the ministerial field, he being called to a pastorate at St. Johnsbury, Vt. The fact that he has been out of college work during that interim is one of the strong arguments made against his return. Since the retirement of President Eaton, the college has been conducted under the direction of Dean George W. Collie. Dr. Collie was tendered the presidency but declined to accept. Under his regime the institution has made marked advancement and is in an especially prosperous condition. The return of Rev. Eaton was opposed by some when the matter was first broached, but the trustees took it on themselves to extend him a call which was accepted. Faculty members believing a mistake had been made by the trustees in asking the former president to return in view of the feeling on the question, decided to acquaint Rev. Eaton of the reception to be accorded him in the event of his return. Former President Eaton is held in high regard as a man, but his return at this time, it is claimed, would not be for the best interests of the school. Friends of the college believe it has a great future before it and that the opportunity now at hand for advancing the institution should not be jeopardized. A large number of students are registered and the doubling of the student body next year is held possible. A different head is deemed necessary if the college is to go forward and as Dr. Collie will not accept the place as president, the faculty and friends believe the trustees should look beyond Rev. Eaton.

RICH MAN SUICIDED AT BELOIT SALOON

Wrote Telegram to Newpew Saying, "This Is Mary's Fault"—Owned Summer Resort at Wautoma.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Beloit, Wis., Jan. 18.—Missing his train at 11:18 Lon Nichols of Wautoma, Wis., a former resident of Beloit, went to the saloon of D. J. Lawler on State street and after writing a letter and telegram stepped out of the back door and blew his brains out with a revolver. The letter, which he left with Mr. Lawler, was addressed to his wife and the message was to his nephew, Henry Bassett of Lincoln, Neb. The latter said, "Forgive your old uncle. This is Mary's fault. Come and plant me soon." Mr. Nichols came to Beloit as an employ of the Berlin Works, when that concern moved here from Berlin, Wis., about fourteen years ago. He was a working man until last July when an uncle in Missouri died and left him $60,000. With this he purchased a hotel at Wautoma and since then has been conducting the hostelry as a summer resort. He came to Beloit a few days ago to dispose of some property here and told friends of his plans and bright prospects for this summer. Though he had been drinking a little during the past few days he was by no means drunk this morning and seemed in good spirits. He arrived at the depot just after the train for Wautoma left and from then on his actions seemed those of an insane man. The "Mary" referred to in the telegram is supposed to be his wife.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy with light rain or snow to night and Saturday, warmer tonight.

A LATEST FAD

A noted English socialist is authority for the statement that when the new doctrine of equal money, and equal everything else, is established, that the next step for reform will be along social lines. He argues that the family as it exists today, is a farce, and that incompatibility should always be considered sufficient ground for divorce. A sort of a free love, go-as-you-please doctrine, in keeping with socialistic ideas, which are more or less popular today.

This is a fine proposition, but it will never be endorsed in this or any other country, where the sacredness of the home is recognized. While it is true that some homes are incongenial, and married life more or less of a lottery, this is no argument in favor of divorce courts, and no reason for denouncing family life a failure.

The average homes of the land are happy homes. They are the secure foundation on which the structure of the nation is built, and its most sacred bulwark.

Socialism is a fine spun theory, so fascinating that it appeals to visionary people, and captivates a class of surface thinkers. Higher institutions of learning are tainted more or less with the pernicious doctrine, because of the textbooks from which they absorb inspiration.

The young man who escaped from the university, and came down to talk to the boys at the Social Union club, the other night, is a fair sample of the product in the extreme. Without knowledge of his pedigree, it is safe to assume that he is a product of the ghetto, with an ancestry not far removed, in full sympathy with full-fledged socialism.

Just why the taxpayers of Wisconsin should be called upon to contribute to this sort of an education, is a problem not yet solved.

The management of the club is to be criticised for introducing a speaker of this kind, unless they were prepared to counteract his influence by strong and sensible arguments on the other side.

David Graham Phillips recently said in a magazine article, that one-tenth of the American people controlled half the wealth of the country. The young man from Madison goes him one better, by claiming that one-eighth of the people have all the wealth. Both statements are false, and yet many people are foolish enough to believe them.

The population of the United States is estimated at 80,000,000. Of this number 25,000,000 are of school age, and would not be expected to hold property. The 6,000,000 farmers, scattered over the land, have 6,000,000 wives, who own property jointly, to the extent of owning all deeds and mortgages.

Three-fourths of the voters in the hamlets, villages and inland cities of the country, pay taxes on real estate. Janesville has 3,500 voters; 2,600 of them own real estate, and 200 more pay taxes on personal property.

The last census shows that 48 per cent of the voters in this country are real estate taxpayers, while an army, well up in the millions, are liberal donors in savings banks.

Socialism belongs to the slums. It thrives in the large centers of population, and is rampant across the seas, but it has no right to exist in God's country.

The ice men are anxiously watching the mercury bulb and registering kicks on the weather man and the existing conditions. Just at present the householder smiles as his coal pile, practically remains stationary, but next summer he will see the difference.

There is much talk in the air regarding the spring election. Advocates of a "tight town" are busy and the wide open element are also laying their wires. Interesting developments may come later. It is safe to say that there will be a general cleaning-up just before the primary and election days.

Madison is still discussing the traction problem. The people want the road, but some of the aldermen think they know better than their constituents. Same old story. Same old game.

Two shiploads of food is a better example of American Christianity towards the sufferers of Kingston than all the telegrams and letters of sympathy could ever be.

If the railroad companies expect any sympathy they need not look in vain. Hard worked crossing clerks feel for them when the multitude of legislative bills pour in on them.

Chicago dog lovers have been making a fight against the use of canines in laboratories by ambitious experimenters. Arguments that chloroform is far better ending than a knife for the unfortunates is well founded.

The old game of using marked money to secure evidence against bootleggers has been played again in New York and an alderman is in the clutches.

Kingston, Jamaica, needs all the sympathy that can be extended these days, and at the same time a few provisions and medical supplies.

PRESS COMMENT.

Something Accomplished
El Paso Herald: The pure food law is certainly working wonders on the labels.

With One Fell Swoop?
Rockford Register-Gazette: The average young man will break the line that is baited only with fudge.

Pitchfork Ben Knows It
Milwaukee Journal: Senator Spooner is dusting Tillman's coat a little, but it is all good advertising for the Chautauqua business.

Provocation Quite Sufficient
Sheboygan Journal: Senator has gone into court to secure $1 gas. The city now pays $140. Nuff said.

'Tis Undisputed Testimony
La Crosse Tribune: There's been lots of talk about the wages of sin, but it remains that sin collects in an hour, what it takes us all day to earn.

Farfetched
Milwaukee Free Press: An eastern newspaper prints the portrait of Miss Grace George, "who will be seen in 'Clothes,'" at such and such a theatre on Friday night. And the winter so far has not been severe in the east!

Hearst
La Crosse Chronicle: This fresh young politician is shown up to be a "dead-beat" in New York politics, and we suppose J. J. McNally was right when he said the yellow journalist robbed the friends who worked for him in Wisconsin.

Concentration—On a Pinhead
Chippewa Falls Independent: Division of labor tends to narrowness and makes the largeness of life more difficult. The workman was once a whole man. He made a shoe or a sickle or a suit of clothes. Now his whole life is concentrated upon a pinhead, or an eyelet or a scrap of cloth.

Eight Big Ones Left
Evening Wisconsin: Michigan university athletes are so disgruntled over the "Big Nine" determination to adhere to the reforms instituted this year for at least another season of football, that they threaten to withdraw from the conference. If they do so it will be the "Big Eight"—that's all.

Cause of Postoffice Deficits

Boston Globe: Congress is coming to see that the deficit in the post-office department would be wiped out if the government's own mail matter weren't carried free. In other words, so far as the business of the general public is concerned, the business of the postoffice now is self-supporting. This has an important bearing on all questions involved in the proposed changes of postal rates.

Here's a Suggestion
Sheboygan Journal: The city and county of Sheboygan had a natural increase in population of 427 during 1906. Assuming that half of this increase belongs to the city, you can figure out how long it would take to reach a population of 30,000 even if nobody moved here. But, it might be added, this city expects at least a few more people to move in, besides those that are born.

Again the Erring Printer Man
Stafford (Kan.) Republican: The unlucky editor sat up after hours to do the subject justice; he described in words that fairly floated the bride and her trousseau; he made your mouth water in describing the refreshments and made every one who had contributed feel like a million-naire when reading the description and list of presents. He would it all up in a as pretty a word picture as you ever read and wrote of the joy attending the affair. The compositor set it up "jay" and the next day one of the editor's best friends, who lived on R. F. D. No. 6, took it as personal and came in and stopped his paper and threatened to mop the floor with the editor.

Battleship Wisconsin Out of Date
Exchange: The fact that after an official survey, the battleship Wisconsin has been ordered to the Bremerton navy yard, on Puget sound, to be brought up to date, will interest thousands of people of this state, who only a little more than nine years were in a fever of enthusiasm over the launching of the ship. The alterations of the ship are not to be expensive, or the estimate of $20,000 would be insufficient. But the need of alteration for improvement in fighting ability at this early date is evidence of the rapidity with which naval development has been progressing.

Exposing the Fast Set
Outlook: The fast woman in society in France compromises herself because she falls under the spell of passion; the fast woman in society in New York, on the other hand, compromises herself to pay for her bonnets and gowns. In the comparison the French fast woman has much the advantage of the American fast woman. They are both essentially vulgar, judged from the strictly social point of view. The men and women of the fast set always force the note. They overeat, overdrink, overdress and overact their parts. They are to people in really civilized society what sensational journalism is to high-class newspaper work. They represent the "yellow" in morals, dress, manners and style of life. It is a mistake to treat them too seriously. Irony, ridicule and sarcasm are the only weapons that touch them.

The Spooner Cure for Tillmanism. Chicago Record-Herald: "A London paper is so outraged by Senator Till-man's yellow assaults on the advocates of simple justice and law for the colored citizens of the United States that it seriously asks why we do not provide "a padded cell" for the wielder of the pitchfork. But we have a better cure for Tillmanism.

It is too much to expect that a few speeches like that of Senator Spooner in connection with the Brownsville affair will silence Tillman, but, they certainly should affect the market demand for his sensational and lurid oratory for summer or winter assemblies.

Senator Spooner convicted Tillman out of his own mouth. In assailing the President for his Brownsville order Tillman excitedly invoked the sacred and fundamental principle of Anglo-Saxon liberty and justice—that a man is innocent until proven guilty. But when justifying or excusing mob rule, hangings and shootings and burnings, Tillman forgets this sacred principle entirely and talks about the supremacy of the white race and the natural inferiority of the negro. And when some one in the audience reminds him of the laws and the constitutional guarantees he shrieks, "To hell with the law!"

Senator Spooner had no difficulty in reducing Tillman to impotent rage by using the deadly parallel against him and, quoting one set of frenzied statements against another. "No man," he said, "can come here with good grace to impeach the President for his dismissal of men that had not been identified as 'criminals' who comes to that accusation from a lynching bee or who justifies 'one'." This is better than a padded cell. Moreover, it is consonant with the sacred principles invoked by Tillman when it suits his purpose to do so.

Japan and Christianity: The Rev. C. K. Lippard, missionary of the United Synod South, who has labored in Saga, Japan, for the past six years, will lecture on Japan and Christianity in St. Peter's English Lutheran church on Sunday evening. Mr. Lippard is enjoying his first vacation in the United States and the Luther League under whose auspices he comes is very fortunate in getting him, for this thorough is allotted him for a much needed rest and people everywhere are anxious to have him address them on the subject of his work. There is no doubt but that his hearers will learn many things of interest concerning this remarkable people that have never found their way into print, and particularly concerning their great war with Russia as it appeared from a Japanese point of view. The public generally is cordially invited.

LOST TWO HUNDRED; TEN NOT RECOVERED

Engineer D. R. Dunwiddie Dropped Large Roll of Bills While Working About Engine.

While working about the switch-engine just after he had brought it to the water tank about five o'clock last evening Engineer D. R. Dunwiddie of the North Western road lost a roll of bills amounting to two hundred dollars. He did not miss the money until he had gone into the roundhouse office and he immediately went to the yards in search of it. In the meantime Fireman Alonzo Duller, who was helping dispatch engines, noticed among the chunks of coal on the deck of the switch-engine what he at first glance supposed was a discarded confectionery box. He passed it by and then returned to pick it up. It was the money and he immediately returned it to the owner, but a ten-dollar bill was missing. It is reported in the yards today that a tramp umbrella mender was about this morning in an intoxicated condition relating how he saw the engine's athletic exhibition last evening and a "few drinks" with a ten-dollar bill which he found on the tracks.

STOCKMAN VS. WIXOM APPEAL IS DISMISSED

And Tanberg Vs. Tallman Action Taken Under Adversity in Circuit Court Today.

In circuit court this morning Judge Grimm granted the motion made by Atty. J. J. Cunningham in behalf of his client, Hugh Stockman, to dismiss the defendant's appeal taken from the verdict in justice court in the action of Stockman vs. G. D. Wixom. More than two years, the period allotted by law, have elapsed since the appeal was taken and it was on this ground that the motion was granted. The suit was brought to recover wages and the defendant entered a counter-claim for injury alleged to have been done by the plaintiff to a rig and team of horses belonging to him. The jury found for the plaintiff. Atty. E. D. McGowan and A. M. Fisher represented the defendant. The trespass action of Willis N. Tanberg vs. Stanley D. Tallman and J. P. Baker was held under advisement, and a motion to dismiss on the ground of lack of jurisdiction will be taken up at two o'clock next Tuesday afternoon. On that same day the jury will try the damage action of Frank Klashka vs. the St. Paul Ry. Co. Judge Grimm returned to Jefferson today.

BOARD ADJOURNED TO MEET IN MAY

Considerable Routine Business Was Transacted by the Supervisors at Final Session.

Henry Sanford of Washington, D. C., who is gathering divorce statistics at the court house for the department of commerce and labor, has apparently, by reason of the drastic action taken yesterday with regard to the school superintendents' reports, formed a very unfavorable opinion of our county board of supervisors. "Do you suppose," he asked this morning, "that they could be persuaded to make an appropriation for a towel to hang at the wash-stand? Whenever any of the officers or myself have occasion to rinse our hands we have to flap them out the window until they are dry and this is a very unpleasant procedure in cold weather."
Before adjournment yesterday afternoon the board passed a measure appropriating $240 for the wages of a stenographer for the district attorney and providing for the payment by the county of his telephone rental. The county school superintendents were allowed $200 each for stationery and printing and $250 for traveling expenses. Provision was made for the customary payment of $10 to the chairman for countersigning orders. The district attorney's bill for expenses in traveling to Chicago and Beloit, in the Mohe case was allowed. Supervisors J. C. McEvoy and E. D. Cannon were entrusted with the task of destroying the old orders. The per diem and mileage for the members was voted.

VALENTINE HOME AGAIN SADDENED

Infant Son Richard Passed Away at Six o'clock Yesterday Afternoon—Age Fifteen Months.
Death, which had carried away an infant daughter and plunged the home in sorrow but two years ago, made another visitation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Valentine at six o'clock last evening and summoned the infant son, Richard, who had been the care and comfort of his parents for fifteen months. This terrible blow coming just as the sun for them had commenced to shine again, brings with it grief and suffering which the deepest sympathy of a legion of friends can only in a measure assuage. Drs. Q. O. Sutherland, W. H. Palmer, and J. F. Pember held a consultation and everything possible was done to save the child's life, but to no avail. The telescoping of the bowels in three places was the direct cause of the child's demise. Private funeral services will be held from the home, 56 Jackson street, at three o'clock Saturday afternoon.

TO CURE CAR SHORTAGE

PRESIDENT TO ASK CONGRESS FOR LEGISLATION.

Thinks Interstate Commerce Commission Should Have Increased Powers to Deal with Emergencies.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Congress will be asked by President Roosevelt to give the interstate commerce commission increased powers to enable that body to deal with such emergencies as that now existing with regard to the car shortage question. The commission already has submitted to the president a preliminary report of the investigations made by some of its members in the northwest into this matter, and it will submit recommendations very soon.

When these are ready the president will prepare a special message to be sent to congress urging necessary legislation. The president made this announcement Thursday at a conference at the White House with Messrs. Knapp, Clements, Harlan and Clarke of the commission and four members of the executive committee of the National Reciprocal Demurrage convention recently held at Chicago, who had come to Washington to take up the matter with Mr. Roosevelt and the commerce commission.

Chairman Knapp, of the interstate commerce commission, indicated generally the views of the commission as to what might be advisable in the way of remedial legislation, and this met the hearty approval of the demurrage representatives.

None of the interstate commerce commissioners was willing Thursday night to be quoted, but unofficially they say the recommendations of the president will include some form of reciprocal demurrage so that the carrier may be penalized for delay in moving as well as the consignee for delay in unloading cars and probably some suggestions for the interchange of cars by railroads to meet extraordinary demands in one section not existing in another.

During their call at the White House one of the demurrage representatives made the statement that because of a dispute between the railroad companies and the consignees, 1,500 cars of coal were held at Minneapolis and several hundred were held at Chicago. The president directed the interstate commerce commissioners to investigate that matter.

District Attorney Devlin Starts Two Suits in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Jan. 18.—United States District Attorney Devlin applied Thursday to the supreme court for a writ of mandate, compelling the board of education to admit Keikichi Aoki, a ten-year-old Japanese boy, to the Redding primary school. He also commenced suit in the United States circuit court for the same purpose.

State rights, the treaty of the United States with Japan, the validity of the order issued by the San Francisco board of education and the constitutionality of a law of the state of California, as well as an interpretation of the word "Mongolian" are involved in the two suits.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

Not only is a medicine valuable for its ability to cure disease, but the way in which it affects the system is a very important factor. When the system is infected with the germs of disease as in Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., every particle of its recuperative strength is needed to assist in eliminating the poisons and impurities which are causing the trouble. It should not be dosed and treated with strong mineral mixtures and concoctions that further add to the burden, by disagreeably affecting the bowels, producing indigestion, or eating out the delicate linings and membranes of the stomach. The absolute vegetable purity of S. S. S. has always been one of the strongest points in its favor, and is one of the principal reasons for its being now the most widely known and universally used blood medicine on the market. It is made entirely of healing, purifying roots, herbs and barks of the forests and fields. These are selected for their well known curative properties, and are known at the same time to possess the qualities to build up and strengthen every part of the system by their fine tonic effect. Not only is S. S. S. the king of blood purifiers, but it is the one medicine that may be taken with absolute safety by young or old. We guarantee it non-injurious and offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral in any form. S. S. S. is a safe and reliable treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, and any and all diseases arising from a poisoned or impure state of the blood. It goes to the very bottom of these troubles, removes every trace of disease, enriches and builds up the blood and permanently cures where mineral medicines fail. If you are suffering with any form of blood disease write for our book on The Blood and ask for any medical advice you may desire; no charge for either. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

GOLF ASSOCIATION IN ANNUAL MEETING

First Time Convention Was Ever Held in West and Chicago Clubs Have Made Great Preparations.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 18.—The city of golf players throughout the country are turned today toward this city, where the United States Golf association is holding its annual session. The meeting, which is being held at the Auditorium, is the greatest in the history of the organization. The delegates meet this afternoon to dispose of some preliminary matters, but the real business of the meeting is not to be transacted until tonight.

This is the first time that the governing body has held its annual meeting in the west and as a consequence the golf clubs of Chicago and vicinity have exerted themselves to their utmost. A luncheon was given at the Auditorium this afternoon and numerous other features have been arranged to make the stay of the visitors a pleasant one. It is expected that many of the delegates will remain in the city until the first of the week.

The chief business of the annual meeting is the election of officers for the year. In this matter the association has merely to ratify the ticket proposed by the nominating committee, to which no opposition will be offered. Several new names appear on the ticket. Daniel Chaucery, of the Garden City Golf club of New York is to succeed Ransom H. Thomas as the Morris Country Golf club, who has served two terms as president of the association. There are to be no alterations in the list of officers, but the executive committee is to be entirely new. The new executive committee will be composed of Silas H. Strawn, Midlothian Country club; Leighton Calkins, Plainfield Country club; Warren Dickinson, Des Moines Golf and Country club; and Herbert Jacques, of the Country Club of Brookline. Those dropped from the committee are H. Chandler Egan of the Exmoor Country club; A. L. Ripley of the Oakley Country club; and H. G. Leggett of the Omaha Country club.

MEXICAN WILL HANG FOR DOUBLE MURDER

Killed Woman and Her Sister When She Jilted Him After He Had Divorced His Wife.

Karnes City, Texas, Jan. 18.—The second legal execution in the history of Karnes county takes place today, the victim being Ramon Campos, a Mexican, whose crime was a most atrocious one. Campos had divorced his wife with the expectation of marrying Juana McHoney, a Mexican woman who lived near here. But after he had obtained his divorce, Juana changed her mind and refused to marry him. On the morning of March 26 last, Campos met Juana, her sister, aged 20 years, and their little brother, aged 2 years, were driving across the country in a buggy. He was walking and they asked him to ride with them. He accepted the invitation and after going a short way began to importune Juana to marry him. She persisted in her refusal. Enraged at this, the man drew a razor from his pocket and cut the girls' throat. When the younger woman screamed he drew his pistol. She grasped it and there was a desperate fight for her life. Both fell from the buggy and the released Campos held on the girl and she started to run away. He fired at her, the bullet taking effect in her head and resulting in instant death. When arrested the man confessed to his crime and appeared indifferent to his fate.

Antiseptic Burglary.
"Even burglars have come to introduce up-to-date methods in their work," remarked J. K. Kins, laying down his newspaper. They probably wanted to save their victim from any danger of blood-poisoning."

Indiana Doctor Tells How North Pole Seekers Are Faring.

AROTTO HARDSHIPS NOT SO BAD

Member of Exploring Expedition Soon Discarded Surplus Clothing and Found Summer Flannels Comfortable—Live Air Chamber Indispensable but Warm Breezes in Sleeping Room—Menu Changed Daily.

Dr. W. N. Fowler of Bluffton, Ind., American physician with the Wellman north pole expedition, writes the following account of the "hardships" he and his fellow scientists are enduring while preparing for their expedition, which has been postponed until next year, says a Bluffton correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Their airship, in which the effort is to be made, could not be got in trim for a northward flight before frost, hence the postponement.

"Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, Camp Wellman, Aug. 4.—I am writing this that our Indiana and Ohio friends may know the privation and isolation we are undergoing for the sake of science and the discovery of the long sought pole. We are encamped in a frame house substantially built, consisting of a house within a house, large and commodious, with a fine dining room, which will accommodate twelve men.

"The living room within the house proper has a live air chamber within its walls, with a circulation of air warmed by the kitchen range and by natural draft brought warm and fresh into each bunk. Solid bunks are arranged in tiers, one above the other, at the sides of the room, nine on one side, starting from the floor, and three on the opposite side, suspended from the ceiling. The bunks are equipped with good mattresses and pillows, sheets, pillow cases and wool blankets. They have large curtains sliding on large brass rods, so that each member of the staff has the privacy of his own bunk.

"The kitchen is equipped with a fine steel range and every necessity for good, clean cooking, a fine enameled sink at one end of the range for washing dishes and a sixty gallon copper tank for warm water at the other. This tank sits against the wall between the kitchen and lavatory, and a tap is placed in the lavatory for obtaining warm water for bath and washing. The luxury of a bathtub in a living house in the arctic is found for the first time in the house of our present abode.

"As most of you have doubtless settled opinions about our daily diet, thinking it possibly consists of bear's tallow; bread and butter; coffee, of course, I am loath to disturb them, and to show my respect for these same opinions I will mention only a few of the things we have to eat in our simple life and will state that our bill of fare changes each day, so that we never tire of our diet. Breakfast consists of fruit, breakfast foods, ham, bacon, eggs, with buckwheat or wheat cakes, cookies, bread, butter and coffee in quantities.

"For dinner, soup, roast beef or boiled lamb, with fresh potatoes and boiled onions, peas, corn, asparagus or tomatoes; bread and butter, apple or mince pie, with coffee or nuts. Meats and vegetables changed each day. Pickles, olives, tomatoes and all kinds of name, chocolate or gelatin puddings are on the table. We have tea at 2:30, at which time, coffee or chocolate, with jam, suet and crackers are served. Then supper at 7:30, consisting of one hot meat and one hot vegetable, with frequently baking powder biscuits with maple sirup or honey or fruit. This is often changed to give variety, and from the articles mentioned you must see the great privations we undergo.

"Then, too, the intense cold of the arctic, from which I was going to perish, has compelled me to make many additions, and then again as many subtractions to my body covering. When I left Tromsø I put on two suits of underwear, two pairs of socks, a woolen shirt, sweater, winter coat and hunting boots and an oilskin suit. I was advised that as soon as I got to sea it would be very cold. Our boat is not a large one, and the weather was rough—so was the sea—and when I came to on the third day and we were alone, the floating ice I imagined I was nearly frozen to death. For two days I could not get rid of this horrible imagination, but when I did I began to peel off clothing until I got down to one suit of summer flannels, with ordinary woolen outer shirt, coat with no vest and ordinary trousers, bare handed and oftener bareheaded and always comfortable.

"Now as to the awful isolation. We had been here less than two weeks when the sister ship to the Fridtjof, the Laura, chartered for the summer by Max Fleishmann of Cincinnati, dropped anchor in our little harbor on the evening of July 4. In his party were Fleishmann and wife, Dr. and Mrs. Holmes, also of Cincinnati, and a Mr. Llamonth, an Englishman. They stayed two days and then left for Greenland. Then on July 17 an excursion steamer, the Oohama, a German boat, with sixty-five tourists, was here for four or five hours. Then on July 18 a French tourist boat, the Ile de France, with 150 tourists on board, was here one whole day. The Prince of Morocco, with his yacht and a scientific expedition, was at anchor for several days in Virgo bay and made several short calls.

"I hope to be able to live through this terrible experience, but if I am not successful please put in my obituary. He did his best. Hope to be in Bluffton on Oct. 20."

CHAPTER XVII.

AT that very moment Mr. Hammond, seated on the fence by the vestry door, was putting at a clear and talking in an unusually loud voice of New York and his experiences there. He seemed to be very happy, and his boisterous laughter penetrated even to the little company of worshippers on the settees inside.

When the meeting was over he threw away the stump of his cigar and shouldered himself into the front row of waiting swains by the door. As Gus came out he stepped forward to meet her and in doing so bumped against Mrs. Piper, who, looking the other way, had not seen him, and, being deaf, had not heard his step.

"Gracious sakes alive!" exclaimed the old lady, rubbing her shoulder. "Excuse me, Mr. Hammond. I didn't see you."

Sam nodded serenely. "Don't mention it," he shouted, winking over his shoulder at Georgiana Bailey. "You didn't hurt me a bit."

Georgiana giggled, and most of the young men grinned at the joke. Gus glanced hurriedly at Mrs. Piper and then at Hammond. She looked surprised and troubled.

Sam took her arm without asking permission and led her to the sidewalk. She still looked back.

"I'm afraid you hurt Mrs. Piper," she said. "What made you so rough?"

Her escort laughed. "I guess it won't be fatal," he observed. "If I'd managed to fracture that voice of hers so's she couldn't sing, maybe the congregation would give me a vote of thanks."

Gus didn't reply. There was something in her companion's manner that made her recoil instinctively. She disengaged her arm from his, but he took it again and walked on, joking and laughing.

"What a crowd of jays there is in this town," he remarked after awhile, with a sneer—"enough to stock a dime museum."

He had always spoken patronizingly of the townspeople—that she had not minded so much, coming from a city man, but heretofore he had not openly made fun of them. She resented the remark, but most of all the tone in which it was uttered.

"Why do you stay here, then?" she asked coldly.

"Why? I guess you know the reason all right. Don't you, Gus? Hey?"

He chuckled and bent down to look in her face. She shivered and drew away from him.

His hand upon her arm, the look he had just given her, his air of assumed proprietorship—above all, that now and vulgar something in his manner, as if the real soul of the man was showing for the first time—filled her with disgust.

She did not speak again until they reached the gate. Then she said, without looking at him, "Good night."

He put his hand over hers on the latch. "Oh, say," he exclaimed, with a laugh, "this isn't a square deal, Gus. Aren't you going to ask me in?"

She tried to snatch her hand away, but he held it fast and, leaning across the gate, threw his arm about her waist and drew her toward him.

"There!" he cried excitedly. "This is more like it. This is more like friends. Give us a kiss. You're too high and mighty to be the prettiest girl on the Cape."

She struggled from his grasp and stood panting. "Oh," she whispered, with a shudder, as she realized the truth—"oh, you've been drinking!"

He laughed foolishly and shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, what's one glass between friends?" he said. "I stopped into Web's a minute, and he set 'em up. First drink I've had since I left New York. Thought you was too sensible to have blue ribbon notions. Come; be more sociable, that's a good girl."

She was afraid of him now—not afraid of physical violence, but as she would have feared the contact with something loathsome and unclean. A sense of utter loneliness came over her. She longed for protection and help. She thought of Bradley. He would have helped her. She could have trusted him. But she had driven him out of her life, and this fellow—

"Go!" she cried. "Go!"

Sam ceased to smile. Other girls had told him to go, but never in that way or with such quivering scorn. He began to realize that this was the end of his game. He had lost the prize. But he made one more effort.

"Oh, say," he cried, "don't get mad, Gus. I was only fooling. Don't be such an old maid. Come here."

She turned on her heel and, without replying, walked toward the house. Hammond swore between his teeth, opened the gate, took one step in her direction and then stopped. He laughed a short, ugly laugh and nodded.

"You mean it, do you?" he asked. "Want me to clear out, hey? Well, don't you fool yourself that I don't know what all you. You can't come the high moral game on me, my lady. You're whining after that sneaking Sunday school kid, Brad Nickerson, the fellow that didn't care enough about you to lift his hand, but stood still and let me walk off with his girl as if she was as common as dish-water. The whole town thinks you're going to marry me. What'll they say when I show 'em I'm done with you?"

He laughed again and put his hands in his pockets.

"I'm going," he said. "I'm going all right. You go on and dream about Brad. Dreams come true sometimes; they say. Maybe I'll dream about him too."

He pulled his hat over his eyes and walked rapidly away. Gus watched him go. Then she went into the house, threw herself into a chair beside the table and laid her head upon her arms.

Sam plumed straight on through the mud and wet grass until he reached the back door of the billiard room. Web Saunders came hurrying to see who it was that had knocked; only the tried and true were admitted at that door.

"Hello, Sam!" he exclaimed, with a look of relief. "Why, what's the matter?"

"Nothing," replied Hammond gruffly. "Where's that jug of yours, Web? I'm dying for another drink."

After cautioning his visitor against speaking so loud Mr. Saunders indicated the whereabouts of the jug. Sam poured out a liberal dose of the villainous cheap "whisky" and drank it forthwith. Then he poured out another.

He refused to go home that night, and Web put him to bed upon one of the settees in the little back room. And in that back room he stayed throughout the next day, drinking frequently, in spite of his friend's protests, and growing more ugly with every drink.

That next day, Friday, was wet and foggy, with occasional cold showers, but there was no wind worth mentioning.

Gus didn't reply. There was something in her companion's manner that made her recoil instinctively. She disengaged her arm from his, but he took it again and walked on, joking and laughing.

"What a crowd of jays there is in this town," he remarked after awhile, with a sneer—"enough to stock a dime museum."

He had always spoken patronizingly of the townspeople—that she had not minded so much, coming from a city man, but heretofore he had not openly made fun of them. She resented the remark, but most of all the tone in which it was uttered.

"Why do you stay here, then?" she asked coldly.

"Why? I guess you know the reason all right. Don't you, Gus? Hey?"

He chuckled and bent down to look in her face. She shivered and drew away from him.

His hand upon her arm, the look he had just given her, his air of assumed proprietorship—above all, that now and vulgar something in his manner, as if the real soul of the man was showing for the first time—filled her with disgust.

She did not speak again until they reached the gate. Then she said, without looking at him, "Good night."

He put his hand over hers on the latch. "Oh, say," he exclaimed, with a laugh, "this isn't a square deal, Gus. Aren't you going to ask me in?"

She tried to snatch her hand away, but he held it fast and, leaning across the gate, threw his arm about her waist and drew her toward him.

"There!" he cried excitedly. "This is more like it. This is more like friends. Give us a kiss. You're too high and mighty to be the prettiest girl on the Cape."

She struggled from his grasp and stood panting. "Oh," she whispered, with a shudder, as she realized the truth—"oh, you've been drinking!"

He laughed foolishly and shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, what's one glass between friends?" he said. "I stopped into Web's a minute, and he set 'em up. First drink I've had since I left New York. Thought you was too sensible to have blue ribbon notions. Come; be more sociable, that's a good girl."

She was afraid of him now—not afraid of physical violence, but as she would have feared the contact with something loathsome and unclean. A sense of utter loneliness came over her. She longed for protection and help. She thought of Bradley. He would have helped her. She could have trusted him. But she had driven him out of her life, and this fellow—

"Go!" she cried. "Go!"

Sam ceased to smile. Other girls had told him to go, but never in that way or with such quivering scorn. He began to realize that this was the end of his game. He had lost the prize. But he made one more effort.

"Oh, say," he cried, "don't get mad, Gus. I was only fooling. Don't be such an old maid. Come here."

She turned on her heel and, without replying, walked toward the house. Hammond swore between his teeth, opened the gate, took one step in her direction and then stopped. He laughed a short, ugly laugh and nodded.

"You mean it, do you?" he asked. "Want me to clear out, hey? Well, don't you fool yourself that I don't know what all you. You can't come the high moral game on me, my lady. You're whining after that sneaking Sunday school kid, Brad Nickerson, the fellow that didn't care enough about you to lift his hand, but stood still and let me walk off with his girl as if she was as common as dish-water. The whole town thinks you're going to marry me. What'll they say when I show 'em I'm done with you?"

He laughed again and put his hands in his pockets.

"I'm going," he said. "I'm going all right. You go on and dream about Brad. Dreams come true sometimes; they say. Maybe I'll dream about him too."

He pulled his hat over his eyes and walked rapidly away. Gus watched him go. Then she went into the house, threw herself into a chair beside the table and laid her head upon her arms.

Sam poured out a liberal dose of the villainous cheap "whisky" and drank it forthwith. Then he poured out another.

He refused to go home that night, and Web put him to bed upon one of the settees in the little back room. And in that back room he stayed throughout the next day, drinking frequently, in spite of his friend's protests, and growing more ugly with every drink.

tioning, and the wreckers put in ten hours of the hardest kind of work. The Freedom had moved perceptibly in the sweep of the latest tides, and the partners, were happy in consequence.

It was dark, though a few stars were showing dimly through the mist overhead when the Diving Belle entered Orham harbor that evening. Alvin Bourse was at the helm, and he brought the schooner alongside the wharf. A half dozen men, the only members of the wrecking gang who returned to Orham, at the end of the day's work, climbed over the stropgropes and departed for their homes in the village. Bourse remained on board when the vessel ran out to her moorings to help his employers make snug for the night.

A few minutes later Bradley stood by the cabin door with a lantern in his hand. Alvin and the captain were forward. Suddenly the junior partner was aware that some one was standing beside him.

"Well, Cap'n Ez," he observed, "all ready to go ashore?"

There was no answer. He looked up into the face of Sam Hammond. The diver wore no overcoat. His stiff hat, battered and muddy, was pushed back on his head. His face under the tumbled, damp hair on the forehead was flushed and scowling, and his half shut eyes had an ugly glimmer. Even in the dim light of the lantern his condition was unmistakable.

Hammond's behavior in his native village had heretofore been of the best so far as this particular vice was concerned. Bradley was dumfounded.

"Hello, Sam!" he exclaimed. "Where'd you come from?"

"Off the wharf," was the gruff answer. "Where'd you think, you fool?"

"It was evident that the fellow was spilling for a fight. Bradley, however, had no wish to quarrel with a drunken man, especially this one."

"All right, all right," he said mechanically. "I didn't see you come aboard; that's all. Want to see Cap'n Ez?"

"No, I don't want to see Cap'n Ez nor any other longshore thief but you. I want to go below and get my things."

"Your things?"

"Yes, my things—my oilskins and the rest of my stuff. I wouldn't leave 'em aboard this rotten tub another minute for a million dollars."

"Oh, very well," Bradley swung open the cabin door and started to lead the wily with the lantern. Hammond shoved him aside.

"I'll go alone," he muttered.

"You can't see without the lantern. You'll have to go with me or wait till tomorrow morning."

"Give me that lantern," snarled Sam, making a grab for it.

Bradley held it out of reach.

"You're not fit to carry it," he said shortly.

"You mean mouthed sneak!" shouted Hammond. "I'm fit to fix you."

Bradley saw the blow coming. He dropped the lantern and ducked. Next instant Sam was upon him, screaming and cursing. They tripped over the swinging door and fell to the deck. Alvin and Captain Titcomb came running from the cockpit.

"What in the nation?" cried the captain. "Here, quit that, you! Let him alone, Brad!"

Hammond yelled and fought as they dragged him to his feet. Finally, overpowered, he sobbed in maudlin fury.

"There, that'll do for you," observed the captain, clapping a big hand over his prisoner's mouth. "Crazy tight, ain't he? Hold still, or, by the ever-lastin' hookbooks, I'll heave you overboard! Where'd he come from?"

"Must have come aboard when we stopped at the wharf," replied Bradley. "He was dead set on taking the lantern and going below after his oilskins and stuff."

"Sooner trust a blind cripple with a lantern. Chuck his dunnage ashore to-morrow mornin'. Now, then," turning to Hammond, "will you walk to the dory or shall we carry you? Shut up! You've caused enough."

He led the way to the side, holding Sam by the coat collar. Bradley followed.

"Ole!" exclaimed the skipper, stopping short. "Didn't shut that cabin door, did you, Brad? I've left that blasted key somewhere, and if that spring lock's snapped shut we'll be in a mess. No? Well, all right then."

They got into the dory and Bradley took up the oars. Bourse sat on the bow thwart, while the captain reclined in the stern with Hammond, sprawling and muttering, between his knees. They had nearly reached the beach when Sam gave a sudden spring and, with an oath, threw himself upon his enemy. Bradley fell backward. The dory heeled until the water lipped the rail.

"You would, would you?" grunted Captain Titcomb. "There!"

Seizing the struggling diver neck and crop, he whirled him bodily over the side.

"Now, then," panted the captain, "if you can't ride like a man, walk!"

Sam went into the cold water with a tremendous splash. It was not deep, and he foundered to his feet, but the shock sobered him a little. He waded to the shore. Turning, he stretched out an arm with a shaking forefinger at the end of it. His rage almost choked him. He tried twice before he managed to speak clearly.

"I pay my debts," he gasped. "I pay my debts!"

"I've heard different," remarked the captain dryly. "But never mind, Sam; it's a good habit."

Hammond did not heed him. "I pay my debts," he repeated. "Do you hear that, Brad Nickerson? You dough-face! I've got your girl away from you already, and that isn't the end. I pay my debts, and Brad Nickerson, I'll pay you!"

He stood for an instant pointing at the dory. Then he stepped back into the darkness. They heard his footsteps crunching the broken clam shells of the road.

"Seems to love you like a brother, don't he, Brad?" observed the captain as they were on their way up town. "I judge from the drift of his entreaties remarks that he's decided to chuck up his job with Titcomb & Nickerson. Well, I calculate he'll resign by mutual consent, as the Irishman did when him and his boss told each other to go to blazes at the same time. I met one of the Metropolitan men when I was up to Boston, and he told me his folks fired Sam because he went on a howlin' spree, so I guess this little shindy was bound to come sooner or later. Kept pretty straight afore sence he's been to home, though, ain't he?"

Bradley did not answer.

Suddenly the captain slapped his thigh.

"Good land!" he exclaimed. "Brad, I've meant to tell you all day and forgot it. The Diving Belle's insured. I went down to Obed's after I left your house last night and we fixed it up. Five thousand dollars, and it went on at noon today—last night. I s'pose it did. He was to telephone the insurance folks this mornin'."

"Good! I'm glad that's settled. It has worried me to think we weren't protected at all."

"Well, I told you I'd do it, didn't I? The only hitch was about that dynamite. But I fixed that. Give Obed to understand we'd took it ashore. We have, all but. I spoke to Peleg, and he'll have it off in a day or so."

Bradley stopped short. "You don't mean to tell me it hasn't gone yet?" he exclaimed. "Why, if anything should happen to the schooner with that stuff aboard the policy wouldn't hold for a minute. I've a good mind to go back now and take it off myself."

"Oh, don't be an old woman!" cried the captain testily. "What do you think's goin' to happen? I'll see to it tomorrow. Come on home."

The junior partner did not press the subject, but he made up his mind that if he lived until the next morning that dynamite should go ashore the minute the Diving Belle reached the Point.

At the gate of the Traveler's Rest they separated. "Coming round to the house by and by, cap'n?" asked Bradley.

The captain's manner changed. "I don't know," he answered gloomily. "I presume likely I may."

HOSTS OF GOOD PEOPLE

All Over This Blessed Land Rise Up and Praise Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines.

Common Gratitude Prompts This Sentiment in Favor of Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

These people, so ready and anxious to recommend Dr. Pierce's Medicines, have themselves been cured, or some friend or loved one has been cured, by these medicines. Naturally, a sense of gratitude prompts such persons to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to other afflicted ones. Notwithstanding that these medicines have been on general sale, in drug and medicine stores, for more than two decades, yet the sale continues to grow as it could not were they not medicines of more than ordinary merit.

Although base attacks have sometimes been made upon Dr. Pierce's medicines which temporarily injured their sale, as in the case of the maliciously, false, scurrilous and libelous article published in 1904 in the Ladies' Home Journal of Philadelphia, yet their sale is greater to-day than ever. The publishers of that paper were brought to account and judgment obtained against them in consequence of their malicious article concerning Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The falsity of its statements were proven in open court and judgment was obtained against its publishers for a substantial amount.

Thereupon Dr. Pierce decided to take a bold step and publish to the whole world a full list of the ingredients entering into his medicines, and this completely confounded his malicious traducers and vindicated both the Doctor and his medicines. In consequence, his medicines have enjoyed a popularity and increase in sale of late, amounting almost to a boom, and it is believed that this greatly increased demand is due largely to the fact of Dr. Pierce's open, honest way of treating his patrons and patients by reposing confidence in those who trust in him and his medicines. He has no secrets to withhold from them. He publishes the composition of his medicines openly and above board, so that all who use them may know exactly what they are taking. Thus they are placed in a class all by themselves and cannot be considered as either secret or patent medicines, for they are in fact neither.

WHAT THEY CURE. People often ask "What do Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines—Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription cure?"

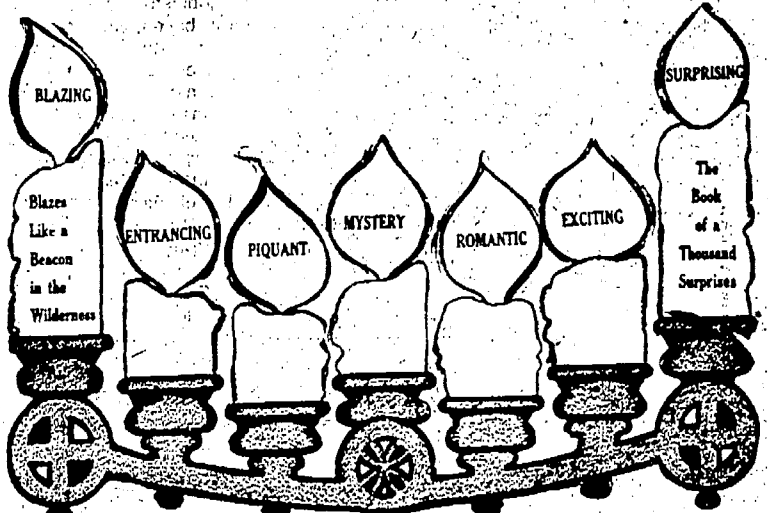

Briefly the answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative, or blood-purifier, and tonic, or invigorator, and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder curing a large percentage of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels, bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections it is generally successful in effecting cures. In fact this "Golden Medical Discovery" is without doubt, the most successful constitutional remedy for all forms of catarrhal diseases known to modern medical science. In chronic Nasal Catarrh, Dr. S. J. Catarrh Remedy fluid should be used for washing and cleansing out the nasal passages, while taking the "Discovery" for its blood-cleansing and specific, healing effects upon the mucous lining membranes. This combined local and general treatment will cure a very large percentage of the worst cases of chronic nasal catarrh, no matter of how many years' standing they may be.

As to the "Favorite Prescription," it is advised for the cure of one class of diseases only—those weaknesses, derangements and irregularities peculiar to women. It is a powerful, yet gently acting, invigorating tonic and nerve. For weak, worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the breakdown, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, strong, vigorous condition of the whole system.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most of our obstinate and most-fatal diseases. If we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this firm conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Not less marvelous is the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections.

You don't have to rely solely upon the manufacturer's say-so as to the power of Dr. Pierce's medicines to cure, as with other medicines sold through druggists. You have the disinterested testimony of a host of the leading medical writers and teachers. Send for this copious testimony. It can be relied upon to be truthful because it is entirely disinterested.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pleasant Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." They are the original Little Liver Pills first put up by Dr. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. They are tiny sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

When Bernhardt Was Fooled.

Sarah Bernhardt once fell victim to a sudden attack of homesickness while she was traveling in eastern Europe. She announced that she was going back to Paris immediately. Bucharest was the next city on the route and Bernhardt's impresario at once sent the following telegram to his advance agent, who was then in the Roumanian capital: "Wire me immediately as follows: 'Nobility and leaders society preparing magnificent reception. Minister of fine arts will be represented station. Torchlight procession, massed bands. Wire exact hour arrival.'" This telegram was duly sent and the impresario showed it to the actress, who forgot her homesickness in view of the magnificent reception awaiting her. When they arrived there were sixty solemn gentlemen in evening dress, with many decorations, on the platform, there were torches, flags and flowers, massed bands played the "Marseillaise" and the triumphal procession started for the hotel. "Are you not coming with us?" said the impresario to his advance agent, who showed signs of remaining at the station instead of going to the hotel. "No," he said. "I must look after the nobility and leaders of society. I am afraid they will bolt with their dress clothes." But the actress, so the story goes, never guessed that the sixty great men at the station were supers hired by the advance agent at 36 cents a head.
